

Haematologica
HAEMATOL/2017/167353
Version 3

Sphingosine kinase 1 participates in the activation, proliferation and survival of chronic lymphocytic leukemia cells.

María Belén Almejún, Mercedes Borge, Ana Colado, Esteban Enrique Elías, Enrique Podaza, Denise Risnik, Carlos Daniel De Brasi, Carmen Stanganelli, Irma Slavutsky, María Cabrejo, Horacio Fernández-Grecco, Raimundo Fernando Bezares, Santiago Cranco, Rubén Ángel Burgos, Julio César Sánchez-Ávalos, Pablo Oppezzo, Mirta Giordano, and Romina Gamberale

Disclosures: This work was supported by grants from Agencia Nacional de Promoción Científica y Tecnológica and Instituto Nacional del Cáncer. GR receive a scientific research grant from Janssen, BRF and GR receive compensation as speakers for Janssen. GR receives compensation as speaker and as a consultant for Roche and Bristol Myers Squibb, and as a member of the advisory board of AbbVie. The remaining authors declare no competing financial interests.

Contributions: AMB did most of the experiments and created the figures; BM, EEE, CA, PE and RD contributed in the purification of age-matched healthy donors and CLL samples, in CD38 and CD49d determination by flow cytometry, in western blot assays and in the analysis and interpretation of the data; SC and SI contributed in IgVH determination and in the analysis and interpretation of the data; DBCD and OP contributed in the analysis and interpretation of the data and collaborated in qRT-PCR assays. CM, FGH, BRF, CS, BRA and SAJC provided patients samples and advice and contributed in the analysis and interpretation of the data; GM participated in the project conception and critically reviewed the manuscript, which was written by RG and AMB; RG designed and supervised the study.