

Haematologica
HAEMATOL/2018/196212
Version 3

Intracardiac or intrapulmonary shunts were present in at least 35% of adults with homozygous sickle cell disease followed in an outpatient clinic

Bryan C. Hambley, Rania Abdul Rahman, Maxwell Reback, Mary Ann O'Riordan, Nathan Langer, Robert C. Gilkeson, Mahazarin Ginwalla, Jane A. Little, and Robert Schilz

Disclosures: This work did not require any funding source. RS: Genetech: Speakers Bureau; Bayer: Consultancy, Speakers Bureau; Gilead: Consultancy, Speakers Bureau; Actelion: Consultancy, Speakers Bureau; United Therapeutics: Consultancy, Research Funding; Merck: Research Funding; Arena: Research Funding; Eiger: Research Funding. All other authors: There are no relationships to disclose.

Contributions: RS made the original clinical observation. BH, RAR, MR, and JL wrote the paper. MAO analyzed the data. RG and MG evaluated imaging and interpreted results. JL, RS, BH, and MG designed the research study. BH, RAR, NL, and MR performed the chart reviews.