

Haematologica
HAEMATOL/2019/224717
Version 3

Functional assessment of glucocerebrosidase modulator efficacy in primary patient-derived macrophages is essential for drug development and patient stratification.

Natalie J. Welsh, Christina A. Gewinner, Kavita Mistry, Mumta Koglin, Juniebel Cooke, Matthew Butler, Ben Powney, Malcolm Roberts, James M. Staddon, and Anthony H.V. Schapira

Disclosures: N. J. W., C. A. G., and M. B., were funded by Eisai Ltd. K. M., M. K., B. P., M. R. And J. M. S. are employees of Eisai Ltd. This work was possible due to funding from the industrial funder Eisai Ltd.

Contributions: Natalie Welsh produced figures 1 and 2, designed and prepared the manuscript, experimental design, discussed data Christina Gewinner performed experiments in figures 1 and 2 and experimental design Kavita Mistry performed experiments in figure 1A-C, discussed data Mumta Koglin performed experiment in figure 1C Juniebel Cooke clinician responsible for patient sample collection Matt Butler performed experiment figure 1D Ben Powney experimental design, discussed data Malcom Roberts experimental design, discussed data Jim Staddon experimental design, discussed data Anthony Schapira drafting and critical review of manuscript